Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative as a Basis for Openness and Social Dialogue

The research studies the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI), its mission, scope of activities and benefits of implementing the initiative for governments, international, non-governmental organizations and civil society based on the official web resources of the EITI and its partner organizations.

It is demonstrated in the research that since the natural resources are a huge wealth of a country, a prudent use of the resources can be an important engine for sustainable economic growth and social development. However, if the resources are managed poorly, it can create negative economic and social impacts in the country, such as raise of corruption, eruption of a conflict.

Family Support Policy – EU Member States and Georgia

Study overviews Family Support Policy in Georgia and EU member countries. It revealed that local self-governments of various regions of Georgia have different policy and different amount of money allocated from budget for families with three or more child.

IDFI aimed to study EU practice and prepared recommendations to improve demographic situation in Georgia.

Research and Recommendations of IDFI on Engagement of the Local Governments in the OGP

6th and 7th commitments of the Open Government Partnership (OGP) Action Plan 2014-2015 outlined implementation of e-governance in the territorial entities, creation of public centers and development of the regions by transformation of their libraries.

Commitments about improvement of public service and implementation of e-governance are laid out in both OGP Georgia Action Plans. However, conducted research showcases that the OGP member states' commitments rather focus on citizen engagement, creation of e-platforms, and engagement of youth, senior citizens and persons with disabilities in the activities of the local governments.

Local Government's Involvement in Elaboration of Anti-Corruption Strategies

IDFI researched the local government's involvement in anti-corruption activities. The research overviews an international practice, analyzes what political documents are elaborated in order to prevent corruption in local governments. IDFI believes it is important to implement principles of openness, transparency, accountability, integrity in local governments and boost citizen engagement - all of which requires a robust anti-corruption policy and effective preventive mechanisms.
